

Preparing for the Crises of Battle

In these days of trench fighting, the bayonet plays an important part. Recruits in all armies are given a thorough course in bayonet fighting before being sent to the front. Below, a French aviator profits by the example of the "tramp" and wraps himself in paper. This novel suit is made of a special paper, and is intended to be worn beneath the uniform.

While awaiting their orders to start for the front, Canadian cavalymen spend many hours practicing with the sword. Horses and men are well padded, and special swords are used to prevent injury.

