

Behind the Scenes of the War

© Underwood and Underwood, N. Y.

At top, a German dépot of telephone materials containing a vast amount of wire and other devices for the prompt installation of an efficient telephone system. The telephone, more than any other single factor, has made trench warfare possible. The illustration shows Vedrines, the famous aviator in his Morane monoplane. The gun shoots straight ahead, and bullets which happen to hit the rapidly revolving propeller are deflected